

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their 62 TV stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of misuse of the public airways by major corporations.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. The public deserves to see "real news," not opinion or propaganda just before the most important election in many years. Democracy embodies fair play and airing all relevant views so that Americans can make an informed decision about their government leaders, especially those who have put their lives on the line for this country. I would like to know how the FCC plans to guarantee that public broadcasts follow the rules that protect the public trust and respected public servants against this proposed action.

Thank you.
